

Centennial Time Line

A Brief History of All Saints Church

All Saints Church is located on Tovaangar, the ancestral homeland of the indigenous Tongva people, who were the original caretakers of this land we occupy, and who were dispossessed of it through the injustices brought about by colonization. The Tongva people continue to remain in relationship with these lands today through ceremony, culture, and stewardship, and we are grateful for their example and leadership. We are guests upon this land, with a responsibility to treat it with respect and care, and to seek justice for indigenous peoples. It is only by telling the whole story that we can tell a new story of this land together. As part of our commitment to seeking reconciliation with the land and all people who have lived on it, and according to our core values of Courageous Justice and Ethical Stewardship, All Saints Church is committed to acknowledging the land's history and working with the Tongva to implement reparative action.

All Saints was incorporated as a parish on April 28, 1886, the first Episcopal parish in Pasadena. In March 1887, the vestry voted to secure 200 feet of land on North Euclid Avenue, and the current site was purchased. The cornerstone of the "new church" was laid on September 6, 1888. The first services were held on Easter Day, April 21, 1889. As the congregation grew, so did the need for more space. In 1923 the parish commissioned the firm of Johnson, Kaufman and Coate, Architects, to design a new building; our current church. The cornerstone was laid on October 7, 1923 and the first service was held on December 21, 1924. Constructed of stone quarried from Bouquet Canyon in Southern California, and roofed with Vermont slate, the church houses a large display of decorative arts in the style popular in the early years of the 20th century. An architectural critic writing about the newly dedicated All Saints Church noted, "It has been said of the interior that it possesses the atmosphere of accumulated prayer. By color in walls and windows, by shadows shot through by softened radiance from a thousand sources in exquisite stained glass, the architects have reached such a result."

In the late 1980s, it became apparent, that the church needed seismic renovation to protect the building in the event of another major earthquake. As part of the 1991 renovation, the Rood Screen, which separated the nave from the chancel, was removed, the choir pews were also removed from the chancel, and the altar was moved to its current location.

St. Barnabas Episcopal Church, Pasadena

Part of the history of All Saints Church is its participation in the systemic segregation of the Jim Crow era. In 1923 African-Americans who were excluded from worshiping at All Saints Church planted St. Barnabas Church as an Episcopal mission. Families from All Saints Church donated land and provided funding for St. Barnabas to build its separate sanctuary on North Fair Oaks Ave, which was dedicated in 1933.

While we celebrate the decades of vibrant ministry of St. Barnabas Church as a neighbor congregation, we also acknowledge our complicity in the sin of racism which led to its founding - and commit to continuing to be engaged in an ongoing process of self-examination, repentance and reconciliation.

Faith in Action at All Saints Church: A Time Line
